Press Release
Lurate Caccivio, October 10, 2017

Aleph LaForte®Paper *the alternative Italian way

Starting from the fashion industry along with the graphic signage and the interior design, digitalization is what truly represents an improvement and a step forward to modernization for all the 3 businesses. Digital printing technology is also moving very fast in order to fulfill the need of state-of-the-art technology requirements but what is the winning response to all of these?

If we think of high performance and efficiency we cannot avoid to mention speed and precision. Aleph LaForte®Paper has a production capacity of 540 sqm/h for a maximum speed of 920 sqm/h with 1850-3200mm width in 4, 6 and 8 colors. Furthermore, the machine reaches a feeding precision below 15 microns and offers a resolution of 1200 dpi.

Besides, Aleph LaForte®Paper stands apart from the competition in terms of low energy and ink consumption as it uses an industrialized vacuum belt feeding system instead of traditional pinch rollers or glue. This allows a high-quality print and no maintenance on the belt, no glue removal and no electrostatic bar that may cause damage to the electronics.

With its distinguishing design and increasing interest from international customers, Aleph LaForte®Paper is entitled to be the alternative Italian way to enter the US market.

Andrea Negretti, Aleph International Sales Manager, says "Participating at SGIA is the starting of the Aleph adventure into the North America market. We want to
